

I received a flyer in the mail last week (the week of Dec. 14th, 2009) from Jeff Watson encouraging me to "Help create jobs in my community and help keep Canada's economy moving forward" Also on that flyer there were boxes to check-off the political party as to what one I felt was the party that was moving forward to achieve the above objectives.

On December 15th, 2009, Jeff Watson went to Michigan to supposedly save as he said it, a few bucks on a particular Christmas present for one of his kids and to take the opportunity to take his wife out for dinner alone, because they apparently don't get out for dinner alone very often and to capitalize on getting some cheap gas at the duty-free gas bar.

By doing this he is actually helping the American economy. After helping the American economy and paying the toll to and from, how much did he really saving using the Canadian money he is paid with from the Canadian taxpayers

He could have bought the Christmas present and gone out for dinner over here in Ontario to help support the Canadian economy like he encourages us to do. I hope the Canadian people don't follow his example, because if they do, the Canadian economy is doomed. I feel he should be setting a good example.

How is he helping to "create jobs in our community and helping the Canadian economy to move forward" if he is going to Michigan to supposedly save a few bucks. Shame on him! Its not Jeff Watson's party I would check-off on the flyer.
